

Home again....what a pleasant surprise to find that fall is not over yet in New Hampshire at the very end of October. The maples have shed their brilliant red and orange leaves but the gold and russet shades are still very beautiful. What a great year for winterberry, very visible all along I-95 coming into the state. And here are my own plots of woodies at the UNH Hort Farm. I'm so glad I didn't miss fall completely!
