4th New Hampshire
GRAZING CONFERENCE

Saturday, March 6, 2010
8 am - 4 pm

at Southern NH University
Manchester, NH

We are excited to have two well-known grazing experts as our speakers this year, Greg Judy from the Green Pastures Farm and Doug Gunnink from the Gunnink Forage Institute. Greg will discuss his success as a mixed-species grazer who used leased land to pay off his farm. Doug will focus on soil nutrients and the nutritional quality of pasture.

Register on-line at:

https://www.events.unh.edu/RegistrationForm.pm?event_id=6502

The event is brought to you by the Granite State Graziers, with support from the USDA-NRCS, UNH Cooperative Extension, and the North Country RC&D Council.

Speaker Biographies

Greg Judy
Author of "No Risk Ranching" and "Comeback Farm"

Green Pastures Farm
Clark, Missouri

Gregg Judy, author of "No Risk Ranching, Custom Grazing on Leased Land" and "Comeback Farms, Rejuvenating Soil, Pastures and Profits with Livestock Grazing management". Is a grass farmer in Clark Missouri? He and his wife Jan run a grazing operation on 1400 acres of leased land. Greg and Jan went from near bankruptcy in 1999 to paying off a 200 acre farm in 3 years with custom grazing on leased land.

Doug Gunnink
Author of "Sustainable Farming Guide Book" and co-author of "Agriculture That Makes Sense"

Wallace Farms and The Gunnink Forage Institute, Minnesota

Doug Gunnink is the author of "Sustainable Farming Guide Book" and co-author of "Agriculture That Makes Sense: Profitability of four Sustainable Farms in Minnesota". Doug is a 25-year veteran in the grass-growing business, and has vast experience in dealing with the delicate balance of soil nutrients, specifically as they relate to animal health.

Brandon Smith
Conservation Agronomist & Heidi Konesco
Soil Conservationist

USDA Natural Resources
Conservation Service of NH

Brandon, a New Hampshire native, earned his BS and MS from UNH in 1997. Brandon later went on to earn his PhD from Cornell University in 2006.

Brandon brings his vast knowledge of cover cropping and conservation farming back home, working as an agronomist for NRCS. Heidi Smith Konesco has been planning grazing systems with farms for 16 years as a Soil Conservationist with NRCS. She has a Bachelor's Degree in Animal Science and has worked on grazing dairy, sheep, swine, and horse farms. In her spare time she grazes sheep and poultry, and plays with her dogs.

David Kennard
Owner & Operator

Wellscroft Farm and Wellscroft Fence Systems
Chesham, NH

Since 1975, Wellscroft Farm has thrived as one of New England's largest working sheep farms. Owner David Kennard has made the farm what it is today. In 2005, the eleven thousandth lamb was born on the farm, which now consists of a flock of roughly 200 commercial Dorset-Cross ewes. In 1999, Wellscroft Farm earned the Farm of Distinction award. Over the last 31 years, Wellscroft Fence Systems has developed a fencing philosophy by testing and refining fencing systems on their own farm.

Gordon Jones
Dairy Farmer
featured in "The New American Farmer, 2nd Edition"
Chichester, NH

Gordon and his wife, Marion, combine careful financial management and innovative forage crop and feeding strategies to achieve their goals for their family and the dairy. Grazing has enabled them to make the best use of their resources and facilities; make gains in herd health and forage quality; reap savings in feed, bedding, and labor costs; and have more time together as a family. The Joneses are the winner of 1999 New Hampshire Green Pastures Award.

Sarah Flack
Grazing Consultant
Northern Vermont

Sarah Flack is a Grazing consultant, independent organic inspector & author of "Organic Dairy Production". She has worked and lived on diversified, organic and biodynamic dairy, livestock and vegetable farms. Her current work includes writing, public speaking and consulting with farms and organizations to help farmers transition to new methods of farming including grass-based, diversified, and organic.

Dorothy Perkins
Educational Program Coordinator
Agricultural Resources

UNH Cooperative Extension
Merrimack County

Dot was born to a New England farm family and grew up learning about commercial vegetable production and marketing. For the past 30 years, Dot and her husband Ralph have been raising all their families' meat using various grazing systems. She earned her BS in Plant Biology in 1996 from UNH. Dot works directly with the growers in Merrimack County in the areas of IPM, plant diseases, weed identification, pasture management, pasture reclamation, poisonous livestock plants and backyard livestock. Her Masters Degree work is focused on using forages high in condensed tannins to control gastrointestinal parasites in ruminants.
