

How To Use Your Food Stamp Benefits

Your food stamp benefits will help you buy more of the foods you need to keep your family healthy.

Tips For Healthy Eating With Your Food Stamp Benefits

Make at least half your grains whole grains.

- ◆ Choose whole grain cereals, breads, rice and pasta.

Vary your veggies.

- ◆ Eat more dark green vegetables, such as broccoli and kale.
- ◆ Eat orange vegetables too, such as carrots and sweet potatoes.
- ◆ Canned and frozen are as healthy as fresh.
- ◆ Serve vegetables in other ways. Try raw vegetables instead of cooked.

Focus on fruits.

- ◆ Eat a variety of fruits.
- ◆ Eat more whole fruits, instead of fruit juice.

Switch to skim or 1% milk.

- ◆ Go low-fat or fat-free when choosing milk, yogurt and other milk products.
- ◆ If you can't drink milk, look for lactose free products.

Vary your protein food choices.

- ◆ Choose low fat or lean meats and poultry.
- ◆ Bake, broil or grill it.
- ◆ Eat more beans and peas.

How To Use Your Food Stamp Benefits

Make Cost Comparisons

Prices for food items may vary a lot depending on where you shop. As a rule, convenience stores and neighborhood markets price items higher than larger supermarkets.

TIPS:

- ◆ Shop at the store that gives you the most value for your dollar.
- ◆ Buy fruits and vegetables in season to save money.
- ◆ Compare prices between different forms of the same food item.
Which is more expensive: canned, fresh or frozen orange juice?
- ◆ Plan meals before you shop.
- ◆ Use the unit pricing information located on the shelf directly below the item. Unit pricing tells you the price per unit, like ounce, quart or pound.
