

Liz Rivet

Liz Rivet is a member of the Strafford County Cooperative Extension Advisory Council, serving first as Vice Chair and now as Chair. She lives in Barrington with her husband Jim and several large dogs. She has a Master of Science in Mathematics from Marquette University and a Ph.D. in Education from UNH. Retired now, Liz worked as an Associate Professor of Information Technology teaching graduate level communications and cybersecurity management. Prior, she was the Chief Information Officer for Clarkson University, the Executive Director of Information Technology for Saint Anselm College, and Assistant Director of Computing and Information Services for UNH. Locally, Liz has been active on building and planning committees and as a Barrington Public Library trustee.

With the assistance of UNH Cooperative Extension and several NRCS grants, she and her husband have reclaimed nearly fifty acres of fields and forests in Barrington.
