FARM MARKET REPORT

1947-1948

INTRODUCTION

Woodland owners and operators are anxious to know the forest market outlook for the winter cutting season of 1947 - 1948. Any prediction of market trends during the coming six-month period must be qualified to allow for unforeseen changes in our economy in a period of postwar uncertainty.

Price Trends in Forest Products

Before selling stumpage, logs, pulpwood, or other forest products, farmers and other woodland owners should determine the prices being paid for forest products. In an early fall survey of markets for forest products made by the County Foresters, it is apparent that prices paid for logs, pulpwood, bolts, and other forest products are generally more than the O.P.A. prices that were in effect during the summer and early fall of 1946. It also appears evident that prices being paid for forest products will hold steady and perhaps will increase for some items during the winter logging and pulping season of 1947-48.

Many woodland owners have been led to believe that stumpage, log, and pulpwood prices have declined because lumber prices, except for top grades, declined slightly during the first half of 1947. Since July first, prices have shown a considerably upward trend. The chief characteristic of the lumber market is uncertainty. Factors affecting pulp and paper prices are on the strong side. Lumber can price itself out of some of its previous markets. The competition of other materials shows no sign of abating, and prices of some of these competitors are less inflationary.

Because of increased labor and operating costs for getting forest products out of the woods, stumpage prices do not reflect an equivalent increase in prices as paid for logs, pulpwood, and boltwood beside the road or at the mill. Stumpage prices ought not to hold at levels detrimental to the long-range economy or the future market prospects of lumber and other wood products. It is quite possible that, in the light of such considerations, stumpage prices in specific instances may be somewhat out of line, especially for the poorer grades of forest products. Downward pressure is to be expected from some timber buyers, particularly the marginal wartime operators who are encountering difficulties under present forest market and operating conditions; this pressure will naturally be in direct ratio to the extent that operators have over-bought.

Regardless of the long-range interest involved, it appears now that unless over-buying of stumpage is considerably more extensive than seems likely, the proper time for talking seriously about substantial or across-the-board stumpage price reductions should be after lumber and pulp prices have dropped and stayed down for from three to six months. Unless there is a general drop in the prices paid for forest products and the general inflationary tendencies recede, stumpage owners have general justification for resisting downward price pressure.

Lumber Conditions in Northeast

Besides the general economic situation that influences the prices paid for forest products, it is evident that the Northeastern states will continue to suffer a chronic shortage of suitable forest products. The Northeastern region has had a timber deficit for years, producing only a fraction of the lumber it consumes. From 1922 to 1942, New England produced only from 30 to 35 per cent of the softwood lumber and from 50 to 75 per cent of the hardwoods it consumed. To make up the difference, lumber has been imported from the West, the South, and the Lake states. About one-third of all the pulpwood consumed has been imported from Canada. Now the timber resources of these regions are becoming depleted and the regions are faced with increased needs of their own. According to a recent reappraisal of our forest resources for the nation as a whole, we are cutting saw timber about twice as fast as it grows.

Forest Resources in New Hampshire

In New Hampshire, we are confronted with the problem of growing forest products to meet our own needs. New Hampshire forest land area is capable of growing sufficient forest resources for our own requirements plus a sizable surplus for export outside the state. To accomplish such an objective woodland owners must determine ways and means of growing wood and timber as a crop. Such a program is a long-range objective and courageous planning is needed if we are to shift from a policy of forest exploitation to one of forest conservation. In the meantime, uses for low-grade forest products must expand. The increased use of low-grade hardwood and pine for pulp, and pine for excelsior are good examples. Low-grade material must be harvested from the forests with the purpose of building up future timber supplies. Closer utilization of wood and timber cut is essential. Greater efficiency in the harvesting and manufacturing of forest products is important. Progress is essential in reducing the hard labor involved in getting forest products out of the woods, and more stable and better living conditions for woods workers is essential if reliable men are to be attracted to the task of timber harvesting.

The 1947-48 forest market report is an attempt to bring to woodland owners, buyers, mill operators and owners of wood-using industries information on current prices paid for forest products, operating costs and other pertinent information relative to the marketing of stumpage and forest products, and a list of forest buyers by counties. For more complete information on names and location of buyers of forest products, specifications of products bought, prices, operating costs, and assistance and advice on woodland management, contact the nearest County Forester. The names and addresses of the County Foresters are listed on page 4 of this bulletin.

Elm	$5 - $10 M.	$22 - $30 M.	$26 - $36 M.

It is extremely difficult to list a range of prices paid for forest products. Quality, quantity, location, logging chance, demand, and other factors affect prices paid. The range in prices paid for hardwood stumpage, roadside and mill deliveries is so varied that the prices quoted are not of much importance. The quality of hardwood varies greatly from a general poor quality in southern New Hampshire to a variation of poor and good quality in northern New Hampshire. Veneer-grade logs of first quality will bring as high as $100 M. delivered at some of the veneer mills in northern New England. The general specifications for veneer logs are as follows: 15 inches at small end, no visible defects, at least 8 feet in length, straight and round, ends must be squared.

* A fair method of determining stumpage values for a tract of timber is to compute the total cost of the operation (cutting and yarding), add about 20 per cent for profit and risk and deduct the whole from the going roadside prices.

LOG RULES AND GRADES

Log Rules generally used are the New Hampshire or Blodgett Rule, which is the legal rule for New Hampshire unless otherwise agreed to by both parties in writing. The International Log Rule is used by a number of buyers. It gives higher values for large straight logs of little taper than does the Blodgett Rule. The Blodgett Rule is favored by those selling small "pasture pine" logs that have excessive taper. The Keene Cord Rule is used in the Keene area. Roughly, 1½ cords is equivalent to 1,000 board feet, depending upon the quality and size of the logs. Along the Vermont border the Vermont Rule is used in a few communities as the Holland or Maine River Log Rule is occasionally used along the Maine border.

For information about Log Rules consult the County Forester.

Since prewar days, buyers of forest products have not been very exacting on specifications. At present few companies or individuals purchase logs by grade other than to establish a price based on average log-run quality—good, medium and poor. More attention is now being given to lumber grades as the trade becomes more exacting in relating the grade of lumber to the price paid.

As the policy of selling and buying lumber by grade becomes more common, those having logs for sale may need to give attention to selling logs graded according to their quality. A few companies are already buying logs on grade, especially hardwood. The company that buys logs on grade will usually furnish the specifications upon request. For information on log and lumber grades consult with the County Forester.

OWNER OPERATION OF WOODLANDS

Woodland owners who have merchantable timber ready for market should consider harvesting it themselves, especially when they have teams and tractors which can be used. Farmers can make productive use of farm equipment and labor during slack periods. The woodland owner who can get out his own logs can realize both the stumpage value and the price that would be paid for woods labor. He also has the advantage of being able to cut just the mature timber and keep his younger growth coming along for later cutting, thus realizing a more continuous income from his forest land.

ASSISTANCE RENDERED BY THE COUNTY FORESTER

Reconnaissance of woodlands with owners and recommendations for managing their woodlands.

Advice to woodland owners on markets for forest products.

Marking of timber or cordwood for cutting, with the help of the owner, as a guide to the owner so that cutting operations can be carried on in a manner that will still leave the woodlands in a productive condition.

Advice to woodland owners on other forest problems.

Demonstrations to woodland owners of best practices to apply in growing a continuous supply of suitable forest products.

*LISTS OF FOREST PRODUCTS BUYERS

Names of buyers listed in this bulletin are those who have indicated to the County Foresters that they are in the market to purchase stumpage, logs, pulpwood, bolts, excelsior wood and other forest products. In contacting forest products buyers and operators, it was found that a majority would consider selective cutting provided there was sufficient volume of timber on the lot to make it worthwhile to set a mill or carry on a logging operation. Owners can well consider giving options for future cuts to operators who will make partial cuttings in stands operated according to good forest management.
