Rockingham County is known for its beautiful seacoast, scenic towns and thriving business and arts communities. The county Extension office in Brentwood supports volunteers from many programs—like 4-H Leaders, Master Gardeners and Nature Groupies—who work to make the state’s second largest county a great place to live. Resident Terry Cook said that he and his husband Stephen Yevich have found volunteering with Extension “to be one of the most enriching experiences of our lives. The opportunity to constantly learn new things and the interaction with the public has been remarkable.”
